by ringing his bell in a manner which would suggest to English ears the notice of a departing train or an approaching muffin man. The bell only adds another dreadful sound to the din; until the Assembly has fairly spent itself with rage and roaring there is no chance of quiet; and even long after the actual tumult is over, there is a visible and audible commotion still overspreading the benches, such as may be observed on the sea the morning after a storm. Yet the President of the Assembly, M. Grevy, is a man of some dignity and authority with a rather imposing presence and a decisive OMAHA LOTTERY! Dr. R. Wilson Carr of Baltimore says he has used it in cases of Scrofula and other diseases with much satisfaction. Rational Assembly at Versailles.

The Assembly meets in the theater of the palace of Versailles. Still one is not prepared somehow to see a parliamentary assembly arranged so completely after the fashion of a theatrical audience. The theater has undorgone hardly any alteration in its arrangement. The tiers of boxes are just as they might have been when a Duc de Richelieu or de Choiseul sat there. The dress circle, as we should call it in London, is principally occupied by the officials, the diplomatists, and their friends. On the second range are the journalists and the more favored class of the general public. The higher you go the less is your favor, until you reach the loges grillees, or little barred pigeon-holes of round shape, just wherethe ceiling begins to slope outward, and which were originally intended for persons who wished to see the performance in the royal theatre without beingsseen, or whom perhaps some of the audience did not desire to see. The pit and the stalls are occupied by the members of the Assembly; the Precident sits on the stage with a huge bell on the table close to his hand. The ministers sit in front of him, but beneath, facing the audience. Between him and the sudience, and a little to his of Scrottila and other alreades with much satisfaction.

Dr. T. C. Pugh of Baltimore recommends it to all persons suffersing with diseased Blood, saying it is superior to any preparation he has ever used.
